3. COMPETITION SUBJECT AND OBJECTIVE

1. The aim of the Competition is to select the best conceptual design proposal for the grounds of the CUT in Krakow's Czyżyny district and its surrounding areas – the entire site or a part of it. Teams choose the exact scope of the project.
2. The competition site is located in Poland, in the city of Krakow, in District XIV Czyżyny. It occupies an area of 280 ha that could be enclosed in a rectangle measuring 1400 × 2000 m.

The site covers 52.5 ha of land owned by the Cracow University of Technology which includes: the Student Village, the Kwadrat Student Club, the grounds of the former Rakowice-Czyżyny Airport and runway, research buildings along Życzkowskiego Street along with the planned Faculty of Computer Science and the existing Faculty of Mechanical Engineering buildings along Jana Pawła II Avenue.

3. The competition is conceived as an ideas contest. Therefore, the proposals should be visionary, and can go beyond the limits of current local law. This, unbound by implementation constraints, allows entrants approach to open their minds and generate a discussion on the future university.
4. The task of developing a conceptual proposal of a modern, eco-friendly and functional campus for the CUT that will blend with the local urban context requires considering distant and near spatial contexts, as well as finding various types of connections and taking a wider area or a selected part of it into the design scope. Only then can innovative designs that could contribute to the quality of urban space and support our city's sustainability efforts be found.

5. Entrants are to submit entries in four categories: architecture, urban planning, landscape architecture and 'open'.

The 'open' category is dedicated for (but not limited to): arts like drawing, photography, sculpture, site-specific works, CUT's visual identity on the site, performance and experiments – both artistic and scientific, related, for instance, to city space, new technologies, material and construction solutions.

Entries will be evaluated within their respective categories. The entrants decide on the categorisation of their entries, but the jury, over the course of its session, can change the category allocation based on a work's merits.

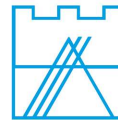

6. The Introductory text and competition theses concerning the subject of the Competition are presented in Appendix 2.
7. The grounds of the Cracow University of Technology in Czyżyny, Cracow and surrounding areas are presented on the map in Appendix 3. Competition teams can choose all or part of the site – depending on the theme and scale of the design idea.

A digital version of the Czyżyny Campus map is available at the competition website.

8. The guidelines for the competition entries are listed in the following appendices:
 - 1) Cracow University of Technology development and investment plans in Appendix 4; they should be applied to the degree suitable for the entry category, site and theme,
 - 2) special conservation areas in Appendix 6; informed decisions concerning special conservation areas should be taken and applied to the degree suitable for the entry category, site and theme.

Site photos and additional information are included at the competition website: <https://arch.pk.edu.pl/campus-competition/>. The information material is advisory, and therefore can be directly used by entrants or considered as a starting point for discussion. More information about the site is available on the city website: https://msip.um.krakow.pl/kompozycje/?config=config_arch.json&lang=en

9. The conceptual design proposals (entries) will be used for a wide-ranging discussion on new design potentials in order to determine conditions and formulate guidelines and recommendations for future design proposals.

 - 1) Innovation: a new approach to thinking about the university campus as a place for a community aware of the challenges of the modern world; a perspective that can become a pretext for discussing the role and significance of the university campus for the city;
 - 2) A bold, spatial response to critical reflection on the city and architecture - suitable to its relevant category; a creative, forward-looking perspective as a pretext for further discussion about the future of a space that has the potential to become Krakow's showcase.
 - 3) A space that promotes the integration and formation of the university's community. It should convey this community's philosophy and celebrate science. It should be open and barrier-free (also barriers of artificial mobility).
 - 4) Sustainability and energy efficiency aimed at minimising environmental impact and long-term operating costs. The use of sustainable materials, energy-efficient systems and environmentally friendly design strategies should complement blue-green infrastructure solutions.

- 5) Pushing the boundaries of conventional design by offering aesthetic and innovative solutions that challenge traditional ideas and contribute to shaping the future of university spaces.
